PREFATORY STATEMENT

Cleanliness in the community is just as important as cleanliness for individuals and families. Using clean and safe toilets, keeping water sources clean and disposing of human waste safely is a good sanitation. Poor sanitation causes great deal of unnecessary sickness and death.

When human waste (feces) is not managed well, it pollutes water, food and soil with germs and leads to diarrhea and other serious health problems. Using toilets prevents germs from getting into environment and protects the health of the whole community.
